

SWITCHING PROCESSOR THREADS DURING LONG LATENCIES

Abstract of the Disclosure

In one embodiment, the present invention includes a method to determine whether execution of an instruction of a first thread may require a long latency and switch to a second thread if the instruction may require the long
5 latency. In certain embodiments, at least one additional instruction may be executed in the first thread while preparing to switch threads.